The sturdy side of the blade can be used to break up small bones or to break open crustaceans.

The wide side of the blade is useful for pressing filets down and for lifting the food, e.g. herbs.

The front part of the blade is used for cutting small vegetables and fruits, e.g. shallot or garlic.

The middle section is for cutting hard and soft foods. The slightly curved blade shape is ideal for mincing herbs and for chopping vegetables.

The back part of the cutting edge is used for foods that are difficult to cut through. The transmission of power is optimal here.

Ergonomic handle gives you a perfect grip

Work ethics and vision of future are two of the qualities that have made this fashion designer with French name famous although he was born in the Italian Veneto. Cardin is considered, among other things, the creator of the concepts unisex and prêt-à-porter.

Pierre Cardin was also a pioneer in a now common practice of applying his fashion ideas to porcelain and cutlery as those presented here but this was not the case in 1968, when he first did it. The style made famous by Pierre Cardin is still reflected faithfully in the current collections.
